MESSAGE FROM THE TRUSTEE

At GreaterGood we rely upon individuals and corporations to support identified charitable need.

We are a close-knit community, well-known for our generosity and giving has always been central to that. Many of our city's proud services have been built on the backs of hard working members of that community.

Canberra is often recognised as a privileged society, with higher average incomes, strong economic performance and great opportunities for our children. In this important Centenary year, GreaterGood proudly stands as a permanent source of income to satisfy ongoing charitable need. Our government cannot do everything and our citizens play a crucial role in making our community a more caring place.

As Canberra, the region and our nation turned their attention to Canberra's Centenary we proudly stepped into our 10th year of giving.

At GreaterGood, on behalf of our account holders, we close our tenth year with a sense of pride and achievement. In ten short years we have collectively amassed capital of $12.175M, resulting in total distributions of $2.476M, largely benefitting charitable causes within the ACT and Region.

During the last period, we welcomed three new accounts to GreaterGood - Footprints Forever Foundation, The Canberra Hospital Foundation and the Ralf lanuzzi Memorial Fund bringing the number of accounts in GreaterGood to 68. I extend my gratitude and appreciation to my Board and staff at GreaterGood. It is my great pleasure to welcome Air Chief Marshal Angus Houston AC, AFC (Ret'd) as a new member. Angus will bring significant influence and acumen to the Board of GreaterGood.

I wish all of our account holders, supporters, our board members and staff a happy holiday season. We look forward to working with you in 2014.

Footprints Forever Foundation –remembering Jamie Leigh Lynch

Jamie Leigh was born in New York City on 18 June 1986 to parents Sheila and Mark Lynch, and loving sister Sally May who was just 14 months old when Jamie was born.

From an early age Jamie's fun and mischievous personality was evident and she quickly stole the hearts of those around her, readily making people laugh with her antics.

Overseas diplomatic postings with her family, moving from one school to another and experiencing diverse cultures was a normal way of life for Jamie and she embraced all and everything that came with this lifestyle. From New York in 1988 to postings in London, Harare and Papua New Guinea, in addition to stints back in Canberra.

From the age of 4 years at school in Kent, England, Jamie developed a liking and talent for music, singing and drama and she won leading parts in various dramatic productions. Her drama skills continued whilst on posting in Harare from 1995 to 1998 where she joined the Reps Theatre group. Described as "an outstanding young talent" by local theatre critics, Jamie scored major parts in several stage productions including: The Darling Buds of May, The Sound of Music and Oliver the musical. She also took up playing the guitar during this time, and having a natural ear for music she quickly passed through the various levels of learning.

Jamie had an innate love and respect of animals and she was delighted when we got our first dog Annie, from the RSPCA in Harare in 1995, quickly followed by another canine friend Peggy early in 1996. Our connection with the RSPCA in Harare grew as Jamie and her sister Sally went on to raise much needed funds for the care of the animals by hosting their own regular stall laden with homemade cakes and biscuits during recess at school. Jamie loved all types of animals, wild, domestic, large and small, but there was little doubt that dogs and pigs were her favourites and she would always have a plentiful supply of pictures of both. Indeed if there was a dog in need of a home Jamie would always ask us – in the hope that we might take in another canine friend.

Life in Africa opened up a plethora of opportunity for exciting travel, and Jamie travelled to many places including safaris in Zimbabwe and Botswana, houseboat holidays and fishing at Lake Kariba, Victoria Falls and aid visits to remote villages to name but a few. Jamie also participated in a 'buddy' visiting programme at the Harare Orphanage where she was very popular with the children.

Frequent trips and residence in Port Moresby, Papua New Guinea afforded Jamie the opportunity to perform voluntary work at the local branch of the RSPCA. Again Jamie befriended many of the local children, and an army of little folk would wait eagerly at the gates to the house when they knew Jamie was about to arrive.

During high school at Girls Grammar in Canberra, Jamie performed work experience at a veterinary clinic. Despite her usual squeamishness at needles she watched and later retold with great interest the many surgical procedures she witnessed. Following high school Jamie was undecided what to do and completed a 2 year diploma of beauty therapy. After working in that field for some time she then commenced a diploma in animal studies. Jamie went on to work in various areas and also did some voluntary work at the RSPCA. Jamie was very popular, and her fun (some would say mad!) sense of humour, caring and easy going personality resulted in her having a wealth of friends all around the world. Tragically Jamie died in a car accident in March this year, aged just 26 years. At the celebration of her life more than 700 people attended and thousands of dollars was donated for her chosen cause – the RSPCA.

In addition to her proper name Jamie was also known as Jam, Jim, Jimmy, James, Jamo, Jame, Jim-Jim and even Reg by her many friends and family members. From these names, in May 2013 'Team Jim Jam' was born and became the biggest ever fundraiser nationwide in the 21 year history of the RSPCA's Million Paws Walk event. A combined effort of 2 teams, based in Canberra and the Gold Coast, donned in Team Jim Jam tee shirts raised in excess of $20,000.00 for the benefit of the RSPCA.

This amazing result was made possible through the dedication and love of Jamie's many friends and family members. A kennel and an area in the Cattery in Canberra have been dedicated to Jamie, with plaques bearing her name and an inscription. Team Jim Jam's participation in the Million Paws Walk will become an annual event through which Jamie's legacy for the love and care of all animals, great and small will continue. The creation of the 'Footprints Forever Foundation' with GreaterGood will continue to provide perpetual funding for the RSPCA, and more importantly the animals Jamie loved.

JACS4GreaterGood Work Place Giving Scheme.

A survey was completed by all contributors of the Jacs4GreaterGood workplace giving scheme in July. The survey outlined 10 causes with 3 charities listed under each cause. Staff voted and there was overwhelming support to have the income distribution from their workplace giving scheme donated to Boundless Canberra. This project is to build and maintain an all abilities playground for children and their families. On the 23 August, the Justice and Community Safety Directorate held their annual Trivia Night where a cheque for $2,350 was presented to Natalie Howson, Board Member of Boundless Canberra. Raffle tickets were sold for 6 prizes, including a gold watch set, photographic session, motorbike rides, $500 gift voucher at JB-Hi Fi, $100 meal voucher at Mr Wei's and accommodation for 2 in a spa suite with Breakfast at the Tradies, Dickson. With the raffle ticket sales and bidding for bonus points on the evening of the event, a further $5,000 was raised and deposited back into the Jacs4GreaterGood workplace giving scheme. Pictured. Andrew Taylor, Public Trustee for the ACT, presents the cheque to Natalie Howson.

GreaterGood is proud to continue the association with the Australian Catholic University (ACU) through its association with the Francis Carroll Scholarship Fund. This $2,500.00 annual scholarship allows a student from the regional areas of NSW the opportunity to study at the University in the field of nursing, para-medicine or social-work. Students can be selected from any year. In 2013 the recipient of the Scholarship is Catherine Anderson. Catherine will use her grant to attend a conference that addresses practical theology with grief and spirituality, purchase history books and other academic material and accessing archival material from two L'Arche communities, in Trosly (France) and also in Canberra. Congratulations Catherine we wish you all the best for your future education.

Outward Bound thanks GreaterGood Kiah Findlay and Anna Walshe were chosen as recipients to attend the Outward Bound Navigator course for 2013. Both students from regional NSW attended the 12 day course in January which is specifically for 15 – 18 year old students. The course is designed to help people discover, develop and achieve their full potential as individuals and future leaders. The course stretches teens to their limits, builds self esteem and confidence and enables young adults to face life's challenges. The course involves true adventure; activities include trekking, abseiling, rafting or kayaking, caving and rock climbing. These two students would not have had this opportunity had it not been made available by the sponsorship from two GreaterGood accounts. The Bray Kargas Family Fund and the Mundango Charitable Trust have been supporting this cause for many years, but it is only this year that we have achieved two sponsorships. Kiah Findlay wrote to GreaterGood to highlight her experience and achievements.

To the members of the GreaterGood Foundation Thank you so much for letting me have the pleasure of attending the navigator course during 2012 run by Outward Bound in the ACT. I think the course would have to be the most amazing experience I have had so far in my life. I learnt amazing life skills that I will never forget such as team work and working together to achieve the target you are aiming for. At school I am a quiet person that sticks to herself but as I worked my way through the course uncovered parts of me that I ever knew were there. I found out I am a great leader that can help change the way people think about a situation as well as motivate them to do more. By the end of the course I wasn't the sheep that followed everyone like I was at the start I am now the person that guides the way. During the course we did community service (washing and cleaning the local fire truck/station) along with team building and communications games like having to climb a giant ladder with someone else making sure you both got to the top (I was partnered with the tallest person in our group). After being with each other for a couple of days we climbed Mt Tenant, making the fastest time that a group has ever climbed the mountain. I will never forget the morning after exploring Legoland, we started walking around 6am in a valley that looked like it had been sprinkled with fairy dust the night before it was just simply magical! I didn't just learn things about myself I meet some of the most amazing people I know now, these people helped me overcome the shy girl I was, encouraging me every step of the way telling me I could do anything I put my mind to. When I am at school now I'm still the quiet girl but you can't judge a book by its cover right! I participate more in class discussions knowing that I have a secret 'talent' that not everyone can have. The bubble that was around me before the Navigator course has slowly started to pop I think one day I might be an amazing leader in the local community. Thank you so much again I couldn't have wished for anything more amazing than the experience I was able to have. Kiah Findley x

June 2013 This year, the Gibson Family Foundation supported the endeavours of Julie-Anne McMillan. Julie was rocked after losing a friend to cancer in early 2013 so she has undertaken to participate in the 1st Annual 'The weekend to End Woman's Cancer' in November 2013. This event is a 60 km walk and proceeds from fundraising go to critical research at Chris O'Brien Lifehouse.

Fast Forward to November: Julie was one of 1,214 participants who collectively raised $3.4 million. Julie alone was the 6th highest fund raiser. She raised $20,140.00. Well done Julie-Anne and well done to the Gibson Family for their support.

The King Charitable Trust team knows a way in which business can turn success into significance. The purpose of the trust was to give back to the local ACT community. King along with our business partners and clients, has over time built the trust. The aim was to build a permanent philanthropic public fund - to have the capital grow each year (along with donations) and to distribute the income on a yearly basis to a local charitable organisation. On the 20th September 2013, the King Charitable Trust provided the Cerebral Palsy Alliance with a cheque for an amount of $2,540. The funds were donated to the Cerebral Palsy Alliance to purchase a "Kidwalker" which is a supportive walking frame for toddlers, who are just beginning to learn to walk, but require specialist support to get going. The Kidwalker is currently the only piece of equipment that will fit toddlers and provides the best type of support to help them make their first independent steps. The King Charitable Trust team were fortunate enough to meet with Lucas, a toddler at the Cerebral Palsy Alliance, who will no doubt benefit greatly from the KidWalker that was purchased by the Trust donation as he learns to walk.

LESSONS FROM THE FIELD: THE ACU THAI-BURMA PROGRAM

The ACU Thai-Burma Program, A Case for a refugee and migrant tertiary education plan that works

Kate Evans, Senior Advisor for the ACU Foundation reflects on her recent journey to South-East Asia where she met the Burmese refugees housed in camps along the Thai border with Burma.

The bustling Thai border town of Mae Sot is situated in the lush green jungle precariously shared with Burma and it is where on Saturday, the 23rd of November, ACU's Executive Dean, Professor Gail Crossley, led the graduation ceremony for thirty-seven ACU Thai-Burma Program students. Mae Sot was host to the joyful event of thirty-six Burmese refugee and migrant students graduating with a Diploma of Liberal Studies with one receiving a Certificate. The occasion that included lunch at a large Thai Catholic School was extraordinary indeed as the tertiary qualification awarded by ACU these hard working Burmese earned is from an internationally accredited institution and is a key to a very bright future.

For most of these graduates, the road to this special day was filled with extreme suffering and hardships that we in Australia can only imagine from the short glimpses we see in the media. The Program students of the Mae Sot cohort have spent the majority of their lives in the border refugee camps. One Mae Sot ACU study centre student, Albert was born in a refugee camp and is now 20. As a Karen, his family fled the ruling Burmese military junta focused on ostracising, torturing and killing in an attempt to enslave the ethnic group in Burma. His family returned to Burma but sent Albert back to live in a camp in Thailand.

When my colleagues and I went into the Mae La refugee camp, we crossed several increasingly imposing checkpoints; recently the camp commander has been tightening access. Never the less on a rainy morning we entered the camp where we slipped, slid and climbed steep jungle terrain through the mud, pass the fragile bamboo shelters with leaves acting as a roof and stopped at the unaccompanied minors dormitories for young boys and girls. These children, like Albert, have made their way across the Thai-Burma border in the pursuit of better education as orphans. We only witnessed a small portion of the Mae La camp that has a population of 50,000 refugees but the mass numbers of children living in these surroundings where safety, sanitation, food and healthcare was not assured made me believe that their situations in Burma must be so oppressive – still – to result to such horrific measures and separation from their parents.

For a select few of these refugees and migrants, tertiary education is now a reality. ACU Thai-Burma Program Coordinator, Duncan MacLaren noted, "Some of the students have already had interviews for universities in Hong Kong to study for a degree. Others hope to work for NGOs or to teach back in Burma where properly trained teachers with critical thinking skills are in short supply." Thus, Professor Crossley's parting words to the graduation audience: "The young people who graduate today are a powerful symbol of the new Burma rising from the ashes of the old." Albert is one such student; he is extremely passionate about being a Burmese Karen and would like to utilise his ACU Diploma to continue his university education and return to lead his people towards peace. Albert strongly feels in his statement, "I now believe my future is in my hands".

Tuesday, the 25th and Wednesday, the 27th of November saw the graduations of ACU Thai-Burma Program cohorts in Bangkok and Ranong, respectively.

Autism Asperger ACT Inc.

Autism is a neurological development disorder for which there is no cure. It is the most commonly occurring childhood disability affecting 1 in 100 people in the community (1 in 50 boys).

Children and adults affected by ASD have significant difficulties with communication and social and emotional understanding. Their lack of flexibility in thinking and behaviour impacts on their understanding of the world. The effects of autism on learning and daily functioning range from mild to severe.

Autism Asperger ACT Inc. (AAACT) is a not-for-profit organisation dedicated to helping individuals, families and carers who are impacted by Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD). The Association is the peak body in the ACT, and provides information, referral, case management, educational programs and workshops for members and the broader community.

Although the Association receives government funding for some of its programs, it relies heavily on volunteers and fundraising to support its operations.

AAACT runs a number of programs and services including: an Autism Advisory service for children from 0-6; the Early Days program for parents and carers from diverse cultural, linguistic and Indigenous backgrounds; a Family Support program for adults and children over seven; a Siblings Program for children with siblings affected by ASD; and a range of workshops, seminars and for women, partners and families. It also provides a library service to members and conducts a number of events throughout the year such as: a Gala Dinner; an Autism Awareness Breakfast; and an information stand at the Multicultural Festival.

A key initiative that the Association is raising funds for is an ASD Centre of Excellence for the ACT, which will provide diagnostic, educational and counselling services; speech and occupational therapies; assistance with accommodation and post school options as well as professional development for parents, teachers and carers. The ACT is the only mainland state or territory without an ASD Centre.

For more information about ASD and/or AAACT, go to www.autismaspergeract.com.au, or call (02) 6176 0514 during business hours.

Charity of the Christmas Season. Traditionally, Christmas is a time of generosity when we place the interests of others before our own. The festive season provides us with an excellent opportunity to show appreciation to our friends and family, to give recognition for acts of kindness and to repair any misunderstandings that may have occurred during the year.

Christmas is also a time of reflection which allows us to consider benefitting people less fortunate than ourselves through an increase in our gifts to charities. Charitable considerations can extend to our will through the inclusion of a charitable bequest after our family and loved ones have been fully provided for.

Testamentary bequests form an essential part of the income of many charities allowing them to continue their valuable work in the community. It is fair to say that bequests by will are no longer the sole province of the wealthy. Statistics show that more and more everyday Australians are including charitable provisions in their will. Mainly this would be in the form of legacies to charities however an attractive alternative is the creation of a commemorative charitable fund to generate income for worthy causes into perpetuity.

The Public Trustee offers a will preparation service for Canberrans wishing to appoint the Public Trustee as executor and can discuss options on how best to include charitable provisions in the will.

One of these options is the creation of a charitable commemorative account through GreaterGood, Canberra's own charitable foundation, which brings together charitable accounts for efficient and low cost administration. An account in GreaterGood provides recognition, preservation of capital, annual distribution of income, income tax exemption and allows good works to go on into perpetuity.

GreaterGood currently holds 68 charitable accounts - many created under will – with a total corpus in excess of $12 million and in ten years has distributed over $2.5 million to charities.

For further information visit www.greatergood.org.au or ring the Public Trustee on 6207 9800 for a confidential will appointment.

1 Relevant Benchmarks are calculated on an after fees basis. 2 Total Return is calculated on an annual basis between starting and ending unit prices with all distributions reinvested. 3 The distribution return represents the amounts paid from the fund by way of distributions. Time periods less than one year are not annualised. 4 The Indirect Cost Ratio (ICR) represents all fees paid from the fund as an annual percentage less reclaimable GST.

While we are only one quarter of the way through this financial year GreaterGood has so far earned a good income return of 4.92% pa. With recent interest rate cuts from the Reserve Bank and with further cuts anticipated in the new year it is evident of how important it is for GreaterGood to be diversified into other investment markets.

With exposure to share markets and fixed interest GreaterGood is able to receive an income return that is currently higher than cash only investments. This is especially essential for accounts invested in GreaterGood's Gift Fund where a 4% distribution must be made to charities each year.

DISTRIBUTIONS

GreaterGood has distributed over $2,476,937.23 to date to local charities since its establishment in 2003. Distribution from 1 August to the end of the 2013 calendar year totalled $69,162.55. There are currently 68 active accounts with a total of $12,175,953 in the corpus. The Public Trustee takes every opportunity to promote GreaterGood and, where appropriate, generates media releases, publicity and photo opportunities.
